RMU MEANS BUSINESS. IT ALWAYS HAS.

RMU’s School of Business prepares students to be ethical professionals empowered with the knowledge and the skills needed to adapt and to excel in a dynamic global marketplace. It is known for its quality, career-oriented business education and for providing life-long learning opportunities. The school’s curriculum balances specific business concentrations on top of a general business core, supported by the traditional liberal arts and an emphasis on engaged learning.

The new 18,000-square-foot School of Business complex, which includes The PNC Trading Center, The United States Steel Corporation Video Conferencing and Technology Center, and The ATI Center, gives the business school its first official home at RMU’s suburban Pittsburgh campus. The new building features the latest in business technology, including 12 Bloomberg terminals that give students access to real-time financial data, and a telepresence room that allows for an immersive video conferencing experience.

RMU boasts the top-ranked hospitality and tourism program among private schools and one of the oldest and most respected undergraduate sport management programs in the country.
